

2 de outubro de 2018

<http://justnews.pt/noticias/how-much-does-a-bad-treatment-cost>

«How much does a bad treatment cost?»

João Marques-Gomes

Nova School of Business and Economics & Nova Medical School

When one asks for a cappuccino at Starbucks or Costa, one knows that the cappuccinos of one and the other coffee shop will not be very much different from each other. When one goes into a hospital, one assumes that the kind of equivalence that one finds among coffee shops can also be found among hospitals. Broadly speaking, anyone of us assumes that the health outcomes among hospitals will not differ much.

The truth is the differences can be very significant. According to the International Consortium for Health Outcomes Measurement (ICHOM), in Germany, the reoperation rate after hip surgery of the best hospital is 18 times lower than the reoperation rate of the worst hospital. Additionally, in Sweden, the variation in capsule complications after cataract surgery is 36 times. This means that the best Swedish hospital has outcomes that are 36 times better than the worst hospital.

João Marques-Gomes no 27.º Congresso da Associação Europeia de Gestores Hospitalares. Curso sobre "uma introdução a cuidados de saúde baseados no valor"

Having variation in health outcomes means that the health systems have been funding clinical practices that are not as good as they could be. This is a worldwide problem that ought to be addressed promptly as it has direct consequences for the patients and their families, as well as for the health care payers.

On the one hand, a bad treatment means that the patient will be sick for a longer period of time and/or that the disease will unnecessarily become more serious. On the other hand, at the level of the health system, a bad treatment can bring more disease and consequently more expense.

The variation in health outcomes among health care providers also translates into a problem of inequality of access to health care, lack of transparency, and breach of trust in government.

Some persons may be fortunate and have a hospital near their homes that produce the best health outcomes, while others may have the misfortune of living near a hospital that produces the worst health outcomes. But perhaps more worrying than this is the fact that the people are kept in the dark regarding the health outcomes of the health care providers.

When a person goes into a hospital, the person goes in good faith trusting that the government agencies have done their jobs, and have ensured that the best possible treatment will be provided.

Unfortunately, the person – anyone of us – may be going into a hospital whose practices lead to very poor outcomes.

I strongly believe that the health outcomes by condition, and at the level of the patient, should be collected straightaway, and that this information should be disclosed. Everyone would benefit from it. The patients would know which providers perform best. The Medical Doctors would use this information to improve their own clinical practice.

This information would also be helpful for them to identify to whom they should refer patients.

Furthermore, this would allow the health care payers to foster the adoption of the best clinical practices, and it would prevent them from paying for bad treatments as if they were good.

Publicações
justNews
www.justnews.pt

BRUNO TRIGO
Redefining the role of hospitals
■ P. 8

FRANCISCO ROCHA GONÇALVES
News hospitals through value healthcare
■ P. 9

ADMINISTRAÇÃO HOSPITALAR
50 ANOS
A CONSTRUIR O SNS

See the photos of the Congress
justnews.pt

Siga-nos
hospital público

HOSPITAL Público
A PARTILHA DE BOAS PRÁTICAS
CONGRESSO

Director: José Alberto Soares
Distribuição gratuita
28 de setembro 2018

27th EAHM CONGRESS
EUROPEAN ASSOCIATION OF HOSPITAL MANAGERS
26 - 28 SEPT. 2018
CASCAIS • PORTUGAL

AFPH
ASSOCIAÇÃO FLORENTE DE GESTORES HOSPITALARES

More than 1000 from 43 countries*

Technical visit at the Hospital de Cascais
■ P. 9

PALOP:
plataforma lusófona para promover sinergias entre países
■ P. 4

FILIPA MOTA E COSTA
Pharma industry: part of the sustainability equation
■ P. 6

Opening Ceremony
The most experienced, talented and knowledgeable healthcare professionals in Cascais
■ P. 2

A journey full of unique and enriching moments

When, in June 2016, AFPH embraced the challenge of organising the EAHM European Congress, we began a journey full of unique and enriching moments. Throughout this journey we always had the support of EAHM and its associates. Today, it is a moment of great joy for us when we acknowledge that you have accepted our invitation, joining us in these 3 days. We hope EAHM2018 meets your expectations and wish you all a productive and enjoyable Congress.

Victor Herdeiro
President of the Local Organising Committee

HOSPITAL Público
A PARTILHA DE BOAS PRÁTICAS

Jornal mensal
Distribuído aos profissionais de saúde das unidades hospitalares do SNS.

justNews
a partilhar informação desde 1981
www.justnews.pt

Artigo publicado no Jornal do 27.º Congresso da Associação Europeia de Gestores Hospitalares.